

FLAME ON!

Easily transported, simple to set-up and built to last. This is a firepit that ticks all the boxes!

The need for a fire pit is real when you go camping. You know, something to contain your fire, and provide a cooking surface. The problem with most fire pits is the sturdier versions are usually too heavy to be transported around from camp to camp, and the lighter versions are often pretty flimsy. That's where Timberwolf Fires have slipped in there with a design perfectly adept to be the best of both worlds. The Ultimate 'Lite' version we tested is a direct copy of its bigger brothers, but it's purposely designed to be more compact and lightweight, which naturally makes portability even easier.

SIMPLE SET-UP

The Ultimate 'Lite' is made from a mix of 4mm and 3mm Australian steel, which is laser cut to precision and simply slots together in an instant. There are no tools required, and you don't need to be a rocket scientist to put it together. Trust us, other inferior designs may look similar, but will have you scratching your head when it comes to setting up and packing them down correctly.

Our test pit included the optional Ultimate "Lite" Ash Tray, which we consider to be the best thing since sliced bread. It simply slots into a couple of notches underneath and does a fantastic job of catching any falling debris that would otherwise burn the surface under the pit.

To pack the fire pit away, it will take you under a minute to disassemble the pieces and store them back into the thick, quality made canvas pouch. Yes, it's that easy.

FEEL THE HEAT

For a compact fire pit, it's actually quite a good size. There's enough room and air flow to get the fire cranking to create plenty of heat, and it comes with a removable grill/hotplate. The grill only covers around half of the fires surface area, but it's large enough to cook a few snags while the kids can still roast their marshmallows. **✔
